CDE Copyright and Intellectual Property Notice

Document	CDE Copyright and Intellectual Property Notice
Organisation	CONSORTIUM DIPLOMATIQUE EUROPÉEN (CDE)
Website	https://cdeu.eu
Last updated	June 2026

1. Ownership of Intellectual Property

The names “CONSORTIUM DIPLOMATIQUE EUROPÉEN”, “CDE”, and all associated names, abbreviations, visual identities, seals, logos, document layouts, website designs, publications, graphics, photographs, texts, templates, digital files and other materials are protected intellectual property of CDE unless expressly stated otherwise.

CDE reserves all rights in its intellectual property, including copyright, trademark rights, database rights, design rights, trade names, domain names and all other rights recognised under applicable Dutch, European and international intellectual property law.

2. Protected Materials

Protected materials include, without limitation:

- the names and abbreviations of CDE;
- logos, seals, emblems, colour schemes and visual identity elements;
- website content, page design, navigation structures and text;
- PDF and Word documents, publications, policies, statements and notices;
- graphics, images, icons, diagrams, templates and downloadable materials;
- news items, press releases, public communications and institutional materials.

3. Permitted Use

Visitors may access and view CDE materials for personal, educational, informational or non-commercial purposes, provided that the materials are not altered and all copyright, ownership and source notices remain visible.

Limited internal use within an organisation may be permitted where such use is strictly informational, non-commercial, non-misleading, and does not imply authorisation, accreditation, partnership, endorsement or official representation by CDE.

4. Prohibited Use

Without prior written permission from CDE, users may not:

- copy, reproduce, modify, translate, adapt, publish, distribute or sell CDE materials;
- use CDE logos, seals, names or visual identity in any document, website, badge, card, certificate, publication or communication;
- create derivative works from CDE documents or templates;
- remove or alter copyright, authorship, source or ownership notices;
- use CDE materials in a way that falsely suggests membership, authority, diplomatic status, accreditation, endorsement, partnership or representation;
- use CDE materials for fraud, misrepresentation, political misuse, unlawful activity or commercial exploitation.

5. No Implied Licence

Nothing on the CDE website grants any licence, right, permission, title or interest in CDE intellectual property by implication, estoppel or otherwise. Any permission must be granted expressly in writing by an authorised representative of CDE.

6. Third-Party Rights

Materials published by CDE may include third-party names, logos, references, images or materials. All third-party intellectual property remains the property of its respective owner. CDE does not claim ownership of third-party content unless expressly stated.

7. Reporting Misuse or Infringement

If you believe that CDE intellectual property is being misused or that content on the CDE website infringes third-party rights, please contact CDE with sufficient detail to identify the issue, the relevant material, and the basis of the claim.

8. Enforcement

CDE may take appropriate legal, administrative or technical measures to protect its intellectual property, prevent misuse, remove infringing content, request correction, suspend access, issue notices, or pursue remedies available under applicable law.

9. Document Integrity

CDE documents should not be altered, reformatted, rebranded, extracted or redistributed in a way that changes their meaning, removes context, modifies legal notices, or falsely suggests authenticity or authorisation.

10. Updates

This Copyright and Intellectual Property Notice may be updated periodically. The latest version published on the CDE website shall apply from the date of publication.
